Draw a fantastical world!

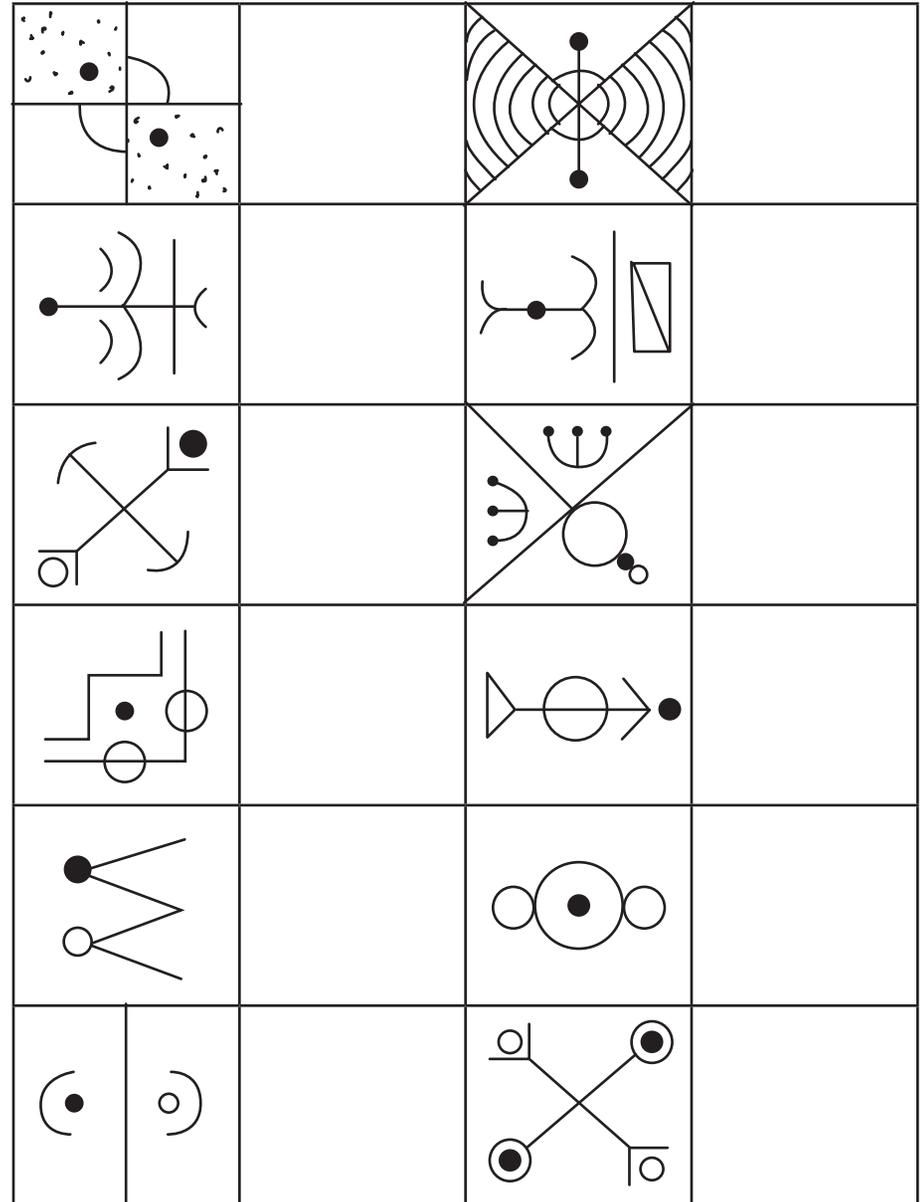

Start by sketching a small cluster of forms in the space provided, like cylinders, boxes, and arches. Next, draw a long, spaghetti-like road that appears to wind around the forms. Erase and redraw lines as needed to create the illusion of depth. Repeat these steps until you've filled the entire box.

Practice drawing what you see by copying the designs below into each adjacent square.

As you draw, notice how symmetry, proportionality, line weight, and negative space factor into each design.

You'll need a timer for this one. Choose an object to draw.

Start by drawing the object for three minutes in the top left corner. Then, draw it for two minutes in the next box. Continue row by row until you have drawn the same object nine times.

Circle your favorite letter of the alphabet and draw it eight different ways using the small squares. Then, pick the most interesting solution and carefully redraw it in the large square.

Look for Untitled (c. 1962) and Stately, Plump, Buck Mulligan in the gallery. Notice how Ray Yoshida has carefully painted each box in the grid to produce vertical symmetry.

Create a design of your own using the template below. Make sure the left and right sides are mirror images of one another!

Use your imagination to finish the drawing in each box!

This one is fun to do side-by-side with a friend. Keep your drawings hidden from one another while you work. When finished, reveal and compare your drawings. For an additional challenge, use a timer.
